Are DRAGNET'S Sergeants Jinxed?

WBRE-TV still is in the process of signing and negotiating network contracts with the National Broadcasting Company. Thus this accompanying schedule is as complete as it can be at the time TV Digest goes to press. Because of the many difficulties involved in getting a new TV station moving smoothly, it is probable that considerably more programming may be added to fill in the gaps in the channel's schedule.

SATURDAY, January 10

- 4:15 PRO BOWL. American Conference stars vs. National Conference Stars in National Football League game.
- 7:30 FILM FEATURES. Full length feature films and short subjects.
- 9:30 YOUR SHOW OF SHOWS. Musical variety revue featuring Sid Caesar and Imogene Coca aided by Bill Hayes, Judy Johnson, Jack Russell, Carl Reiner, Hamilton Trio.
- 10:30 YOUR HIT PARADE. The top seven tunes get special treatment from Dorothy Collins, June Valli, Snooky Lanson, Russell Arms, the Hit Paraders and Raymond Scott's orchestra.

SUNDAY, January 11

Please limit letters to 50 words. Give name and address for reference; name will be withheld if desired.

Fairmeadows Fan

... I would like some information about "Fairmeadows U.S.A." which appeared on Kate Smith's show. When did it first appear on her show? Is the cast the same as when the Fairmeadows show was first on TV?

C.S., Trenton, N.J.

• The sketches first appeared on the Kate Smith Hour on September 8, under the title of "The House In The Garden". Of the original Fairmeadows cast Ruth Matteson, Tom Taylor, Mildren Strongin, Viola Roache, Virginia Sale, James Vickery and Jane Sutherland were seen, but several other portrayals were changed.—Ed.

Durante Theory

... I read the very interesting story of Jimmy Durante in your recent issue of TV Digest and enjoyed it very much. A thought came to my mind about "Mrs. Calabash." In Mr. Durante's nationality and mine "Calabash" means "Come downstairs." I was wondering if he isn't referring to his late wife, to whom he was so devoted.

Mrs. N. Giardello, Reading, Pa.

• There are all sorts of interesting ideas concerning the identity of "Mrs. Calabash" and since Jimmy isn't revealing who she is, your guess is as good as anybody's. Most unusual of the letters received on this subject was one which came in several years back. It was from a woman who insisted SHE was Mrs. Calabash. The letter even included an affidavit to that effect!—Ed.

The McCoy

... Was that really Topper that Hopalong Cassidy rode in Gimbel's Thanksgiving Day Parade?

Miriam Silcox, Phila.

• That was Topper.—Ed.

Down With Red

... Anything you can do to obliterate the Red Skelton Show will be appreciated. As a mother I cannot permit my child to witness this awful thing. Dorothy Fisher, Denver, Pa.

Real Monicker

... We are interested in knowing the real name of Red Buttons.

Mary Sullivan, Phila.

• Aaron Chwatt was Red's original name.

Slightly Related

... Please tell if Johnny McPhee of "Twenty Questions" is related to Frank McPhee, captain of the 1952 Princeton football team. They seem to resemble each other.

E. H. Jones, Woodbury, N. J.

• They're cousins.—Ed.

The Secret Word

... On a Groucho Marx Show some time ago the secret word was "Door." One of the guests said the word and was not given the $100. Please explain.

Mrs. TV, New Holland, Pa.

• The fact that the guest said the secret word passed unnoticed until after the show when the station and sponsors were bombarded with phone calls and letters. The error was rectified and a check for $100 went out to that contestant.—Ed.

It Goes On And On

... Could you please settle an argument between my wife and me. On the show "Unexpected" on November 27, I say the man who played opposite Martha Vickers was Gig Young. My wife says no. Could you please set us straight? George J. Bayers, Phila.

• Your wife is right. Gig Young was not in the cast. Pat O'Moore played the husband while Ramsey Hill played the husband's partner.—Ed.

That's The Girl

... Please tell me if the Sandy Stewart who appeared on "Bandstand" last month is the same person as Sandy Gale, once a Gretz Golden Girl on the "Cavalcade of Girls."

Mrs. Pat Scarpa, Vineland, N.J.

• Same girl.—Ed.

No Coincidence

... There was a Barbara Nelson who appeared on the Ozzie and Harriet show some time ago. Is she related to the Ozzie Nelsons or is it just a coincidence that she has the same name?

Mrs. D. Magee, Trenton, N. J.

• Barbara Nelson is Ozzie's sister-in-law.—Ed.

On The Beam

... On the Dennis Day show, the doors on the TV set seem to open by themselves during the commercial. How is this done?

Richard Ulrich, Mohnton, Pa.

• The doors work electronically. As the camera moves in a beam is broken, setting off a trigger which causes a spring to release—opening and/or closing the doors. It works on the same principle as those doors in the new stores, markets, railroad stations, etc.—Ed.

We Deliver The Goods

... For several years I have been trying to purchase a raincoat similar to the one worn by Roscoe Karns in the "Rocky King" program. Could you advise me what kind of a coat it is?

William M. Power, Doylestown, Pa.

• Roscoe Karns tells us his coat is called a "Galecloth Coacher" made by the Alligator Company. He has had his for years and it has become lighter due to constant cleaning. He mentions in passing that a "Rocky King Raincoat" should be on the market this Spring.—Ed.

Subject of Disagreement

... Would you please settle a disagreement for us? What kind of grain is shown on the Lone Ranger commercial? R. R. Wheeler, Chester, Pa.

• What you see is a field of oats.—Ed.

video vignettes

Eddie Cantor

Through his annual "Give a Gift to a Yank Who Gave" campaign, via his radio show, Eddie Cantor has brought in more than 11 million Christmas gifts for hospitalized servicemen in the past seven years. On his future TV appearances Cantor will announce a change to a 12-month-a-year plan, not for gifts but for pints of blood. . . . Bill Hayes, of "Your Show of Shows," has been signed for the forthcoming Rodgers and Hammerstein musical, "Me and Juliet." Hayes is scheduled to leave "Show of Shows" March 14 so that he can start rehearsals for the musical. . . . Alan Mowbray, familiar film figure, will have the lead in the new ABC-TV show, "Colonel Humphrey Flack," based on the Saturday Evening Post stories.

Charles Laughton, in addition to his readings on his new show, also directs and collaborates on research for these telefilms. . . . Gloria Gordon, the Mrs. O'Reilly of "My Friend Irma" fame, spends her spare time between show rehearsals knitting socks for her son. Son is none other than Gale Gordon, the touchy tempered principal in "Our Miss Brooks." . . . Richard Denning, male half of the Mr. and Mrs. North stanza, is co-starring with John Ireland in movie called "49 Men." . . . Greta Garbo may be lured into TV by fat fee offered for an "Omnibus" appearance. The bashful Swede can pick up $50,000 for a seven-minute dramatic stint on the CBS endeavor.

Charles Laughton

John Cameron Swayze

John Cameron Swayze will soon be seen in a series titled "Vacationland, America." Series comprises films of Swayze's, his wife and children's various weekend vacations taken throughout the country. . . . The first "I Love Lucy" feature film, based on three episodes of the TV series, will be released throughout country early this spring. . . . Archie Bleyer, Arthur Godfrey's musical director, has organized his own recording company, with Julius LaRosa, Godfrey warbler, the first star to be signed. Disk outfit will be known as "Cadence Records." . . . Old time Swedish comic, El Brendel, will be seen in "My Little Margie" show. Former matinee idol, Walter Woolf King, will also be included in future "Margie" episodes.

J. Carrol Naish and "Life With Luigi," though top rated, was axed by sponsor because of complaints that "Luigi perpetuates the Italian stereotype." . . . It's reported Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis have notified NBC that they wish to bow out of future appearances on the "Colgate Comedy Hour." The comedy duo is scheduled for five more shots this season. . . . Makers of Tootsie Rolls find TV mighty sweet. Starting in February outfit will add 15-minutes to its Sunday morning sponsorship. Show will be tagged "Junior TV Teen Club" and will feature talented moppets from 5 to 10 years of age, with each week's winner earning a spot on "TV Teen Club" program, also sponsored by Tootsie Roll.

Will "OUR MISS BROOKS" Get Her Man?

*At least Eve Arden who plays the pursuing teacher, gets "E"
for effort*

ROMANTIC PAIR? Would seem Brooksie has come to the exasperation point with lover boy Boynton.

As the weeks go by and the devious, sometimes diabolical, man-catching plans of "Our Miss Brooks" fail to snare Professor Boynton, the sixty-four dollar question seems to be: will Miss Brooks finally snare a mate? Or will she join the ranks of such frustrated females as Daisy Mae (who recently had her years of chasing pay off), Jane Stacey, Maisy, and the two Old Maids?

No one can complain that Connie Brooks hasn't been in there pitching, plotting and planning. The patient-long-suffering schoolmarm has tried charm, coyness, the intelligent approach, and any other suggestions offered by the faculty and students.

One week Miss Brooks followed through on the old adage, "the way to a man's heart is through his stomach." In cahoots with her landlady, Mrs. Davis, she lured the boob-like Boynton to a home-cooked meal, followed by a "slippers and pipe" atmosphere. Boynton kicked the adage into a cocked hat . . . instead of becoming heart sore because of Connie, he got heart burn because of the roast beef.

IT MUST BE LOVE: Below Miss Brooks is taken to lunch and gets 'taken' by the prof. At Right, Boynton protests when Brooksie tries the domestic touch on her unresponsive boyfriend.

The intelligent approach left its mark on Miss Brooks, if not on the biology teacher. Her Cook's Tour of the bio lab boomeranged as Connie cringed from the pickled toads and bottled bugs while Mr. Boynton boasted of the beauty of the beasts.

The prof failed to rise to the occasion when the romance of Mother Nature was introduced by Miss Brooks. A day in the country, 'midst the twittering of the birds, the rippling of the brook, the gentle whisper of the trees, brought forth the Eve in Connie but no more than a rash on Boynton.

Popular In Radio

The radio audience had known Miss Brooks only by means of the brassy, bossy voice of Eve Arden. When she hit the television screen the public agreed that the tall, willowy blonde brought humor into the classroom but never maligned the profession with a burlesque interpretation.

And so it goes, with Our Miss Brooks showing all the emotions of a normal single female and Professor Boynton showing all the reaction of a normal, single hunk of granite.

Ironically, Eve Arden, who, of course, portrays the role of Our Miss Brooks, realizes no real-life experiences to aid her in her reel-life problems. In private life she is the happily-married wife of Brooks West who, coincidentally, plays the part of the hard-to-catch Richard Rhineland in "My Friend Irma." The Wests, with Eve's two adopted children, Liza and Connie, live a comfy, family life in the Hollywood Hills.

Changed Her Name

Born Eunice Quedonse, she changed her name to Eve Arden as soon as she got her first stage assignment at the Alcazar Theatre in San Francisco. Eve's solid acting background includes plenty of road work as well as plenty of big time. As the leading woman of a quartet called the Band-box Repertory Theater, Eve says she played the 'phone booth' circuit. Following a session at the Pasadena Playhouse she headed for New York and landed in the "Ziegfeld Follies of 1936." One Follies led to another 'til Hollywood beckoned. In eight years Eve's parts grew in stature and importance and she finally hit the top of the billing. Next the lady embarked in radio, with a featured spot on the Danny Kaye show. Radio was another media which Eve conquered, with her own "Miss Brooks" show which wound up in the top-ten listings three of its four years.

It's this background that makes TV's "Miss Brooks" lovable, likable and livable.

Miss Arden has a large flock of honest-to-goodness school teachers as fans. They're happy that Our Miss Brooks is pictured as a human being, even as you and I... they apparently feel that the fictional pedagogue presents a pretty fair portrait of today's educator. Except, of course, that real-life teachers have a better batting average when it comes to snaring that male—at least we hope so!

Will She Get Her Man?

The eventual fate of Our Miss Brooks and her marital status is in the hands of Al Lewis, writer and director of the show. Al won't give a peep of info regarding Brooksie's future but it well may be the TV fans will take a hand in the matter. It also may be that those influential ratings will decide Connie's connubial condition. Since 1948 the radio public has been following the flights and fancies of Miss Brooks' love life. Now they keep hot on her trail via video.

REAL-LIFE FAMILY: Here Eve Arden poses with her husband, Brooks West, and her two adopted children, Liza, 4, and Connie, 7.

YOUR TV SET CAN

KILL YOU!

WARNING: Don't tinker with your TV set . . . possibly you AND your pocket-book might get hurt.

WHEN the comic steps before your TV screen and says, "This'll kill you!", be sure it's just his jokes that do the slaying and not the set at which you happen to be looking. Lay that screwdriver down, friend, and listen to some cold facts re your TV set.

It is estimated that on today's market there are approximately 165 manufacturers of television sets throughout the country. Approximately 50 different brands or makes of sets are sold in the Philadelphia and surrounding area. More than 400 components go to make up the average set, including 16 or 17 tubes. High voltage operates these sets, from 12 to 15,000 volts. Four distinct circuits, all working perfectly and coordinately, are involved in bringing the TV set owner a clear, perfect picture . . . horizontal, vertical, video, and audio. So much for the rough sketch of what your set is made of . . . now to a few other facts or "tips on how to live with your TV set."

The bane of every serviceman's existence these days, as well as the villain in the television owner's life, is the inexperience of the average citizen in the world of electronics. From their past encounters with radio repairs, the home repairman usually figures tubes are the main cause of his television woes . . . if a tube is hot it's working, etc. Don't believe it! The electronic engineer advises that many tubes are on their last legs when they're hot, others may be defective when either hot or cold and still others are always cold. In addition to tube trouble causing distortion or lack of lock or other forms of imperfection in your picture, the repairman who knows will check for such things as a faulty capacitor, resistors, coils (of which there are varying types).

Picture Tube Is Delicate

James R. Goodman, director of Radio Electronics Institute in Philadelphia, points out the matter of the delicacy of the picture tube. Mr. Goodman says too many people know the price of replacing a picture tube but too few realize the danger involved in handling the tube or even working so closely to the tube that it can be bumped or tapped. He explains that the picture tube is of extremely high vacuum, making pressure from the outside a tremendous danger. Any slight strain or smart tap on the tube could cause an implosion . . . that is, the impact would first smash the face of your tube in toward the socket, and this in turn could result in the socket and sides exploding outward.

Albert M. Haas, president of the Television Contractors Association, deplors the suggestion that the set owner remove tubes and take them to the serviceman for testing. Mr. Haas says that tubes can become so hot that contact with the bare hand can result in second or third degree burns. Secondly, he states, there is no known checking equipment for individual tubes. Your set is really the tube tester, for the only present method of checking is by replacing tubes and comparing the resulting picture. Four or five of the same type tube may be tried before one that matches the characteristics of the original tube is found. This is necessitated by the fact that tubes are adjusted to each other and the specific set at the factory. Any disturbance of this blending causes imperfection.

Precision Instrument

Mr. Haas lays the cause of home repair woes to the fact that the set owner has not been educated to the fact that in dealing with television one is dealing with the non-materialistic elements of sight and sound . . . that your TV set is an electronic precision instrument whose intricacies are known only to specially trained men. He believes that once the public realizes that television service is a profession and not just an unskilled business of tinkering, the set owner will cease his futile and sometimes fatal attempts to save a penny by doing his own TV set repairs.

Mort Farr, well-known appliance dealer and television enthusiast, agrees with this opinion and feels the dealer should be honest with the consumer. He has stated that the average video set owner can expect to make as many as seven service calls per year and that within three years of the date of purchase, the owner will have spent as much in service charges as he originally paid for the set.

The Shock Can Kill

As for actual injuries, all the authorities mentioned know of cases where amateur home repairmen have suffered personal harm, both in their living rooms and on their rooftops. Though the power in a high voltage set is not sufficient to kill a person, the resultant shock from this voltage entering the body can, in the cases of heart patients, highly nervous persons, or highly sensitive persons, cause sudden death. Just recently a man, making an antenna installation, came in contact with the rain spouting on the roof while holding a hot AC-DC lead which he planned to connect to the aerial . . . he never made the connection . . . they buried him three days later.

All manufacturers, dealers and servicemen specifically point out that every set has a warning, in nice big black letters, on the back panel. It is a warning from the manufacturer that the owner should not touch the back but call a serviceman who knows the intricacies of the set.

All those in the know say that the set owner's place is in front of his television . . . front panel controls are placed there so that the owner can make adjustments which are merely atmospheric or local.

In addition, to personal injuries, home repairs turn out to be a very expensive proposition, nine out of ten times. Servicemen report that many jobs which would probably cost the minimum service charge plus perhaps a minor tube, have been so disturbed in alignment, tube harmony, focus, etc., that the repair bill totals two or three times greater than necessary.

Add up the cost of a doctor bill, time out from work if the injury is disabling, then the subsequent cost of repairing the set, and you find home-repairs a costly project.

So don't let that TV set be the death of you. When it goes on the blink, call a qualified serviceman.

Are DRAGNET'S Sergeants Jinxed?

The mystery of Sergeant Friday's partners . . . and what happens to them

THE detectives in Dragnet who operate in realistic police fashion, always work on a case in pairs. And on the program the partner of Sgt. Joe Friday is half of the heart, mind, and courage of his fellow detective.

While Jack Webb, who plays Sgt. Friday, is star of Dragnet as well as director, his detective buddy usually gets equal footage with Webb and plays just as important a role in the unfolding of an authentic police case. So that when Sgt. Friday gets a new partner, it affects Dragnet's large and steady audience much like a change on an actual police force.

For this reason any cast changes must be handled with extreme care. Long hours of thought and consideration go into the selection of all actors in this top-flight production.

When the Dragnet radio show started some three-and-a-half years ago, the choice of Bart Yarborough as Sgt. Friday's partner was a happy one. Bart complemented Webb well by offering a personality contrast.

Physically, the two men were completely different. Temperamentally also: Yarborough was gentle, soft-spoken; Webb, energetic and hard-driving.

When Dragnet moved into TV, Bart remained in the role. As Detective Sgt. Ben Romero, he was a considerable factor in the success of the series and became firmly established as Webb's alter ego.

Death of Yarborough

On December 22, 1951, Barton Yarborough was stricken with a heart attack and died. The sudden death of this fine actor was a tremendous personal loss to many.

It also posed a production dilemma, for the film footage had to be scrapped and new scenes shot.

A new partner had to be assigned

SERGEANT FRIDAY'S first partner on the program was the late Bart Yarborough (right) who died of a heart attack last December.

NEXT SERGEANT: It seemed that the role was jinxed when Barney Phillips (above left) suddenly left the show—incorrectly cast they said.

to Joe Friday, immediately. Barney Phillips, a native of St. Louis, who had migrated to Los Angeles, won the coveted role. The new character was named Sgt. Ed Jacobs, and the series went forward.

Then Sgt. Jacobs, as suddenly as he had appeared on the home screens, disappeared from them. Later, the puzzlement of viewers was intensified by Phillips' turning up as a stooge with Bob Hope on The Comedy Hour.

The explanation was this: After viewing the films in which Phillips had appeared with Webb, the producers were disturbed by the similarity between Sgt. Friday and his partner. If you closed your eyes, it was hard to tell which was speaking. Both were introvert types. Every scene was dominated by the same mood, with the same underplaying. And so Barney was dropped.

Currently, Officer Frank Smith is Webb's partner. He is played by Ben Alexander, an actor-announcer on the Hollywood beat for a long time.

One wonders what his future will be on Dragnet. Will the jinx overtake him, or will he develop into the permanent partner Jack Webb has been seeking?

CURRENT SIDEKICK: Now the portrayal of Sergeant Friday's partner is done by Ben Alexander (shown at right behind Jack Webb). Will the jinx continue?

TV INVITES YOU TO A PRESIDENTIAL INAUGURATION

*Networks plan
complete coverage*

Part I of a two part article

BACK in January, 1949, TV Digest, which was just a pup in the publication field, announced the televising of the Presidential Inauguration by stating "an event unprecedented in all history will take place . . . when the President of the United States is inaugurated . . . in your living room."

"When the newly elected leaders take oath . . . as many as ten million viewers will be able to see the historic ceremonies in 14 American cities ranging from Richmond to Boston and from Philadelphia westward to Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Louis."

The tremendous strides taken in the infant field of television can best be described by the fact that today, four years since the initial televised Inauguration, televiewers from coast to coast are nonchalantly discussing just which part of the complete video coverage they want to see . . . 20 million television set owners, that is, who make up a potential viewing audience of 75,000,000!

With the experience of the Convention coverages under their belts, the networks have laid extensive plans for keeping the television audience informed on every move made by the principal characters on Tuesday, January 20, 1953.

NBC will offer a five-hour telecast, with four hours sponsored by General Motors and the noon-hour swearing-in ceremonies and inaugural speech of President Eisenhower being carried as a public service.

From before noon until approximately 4:40 p.m. NBC's cameras will escort the inaugural parade from the White House to the Capitol and back again. Then the net's electronic eye will pass the parade in review from a vantage point opposite the presidential party in front of the White House.

For the first Republican Inauguration in 20 years, NBC will muster key personnel and latest model equipment from broadcast centers across the country. Fifteen fixed mobile electronic cameras and 50 microphones will aid 15 reporters and commentators. Special mobile TV units equipped with studio-type cameras, the new hand-sized camera, back-pack radio transmitters, a telescopic skylift called the Industrial Monkey, used to elevate cameras and commentators above the heads of the crowd, are among the many devices to be used. Half a dozen film camera crews, a complete film laboratory staff and "hot" developers for film will supplement NBC's live coverage of the parade.

CBS-TV's coverage, except for the actual Inauguration ceremonies and address, will be sponsored by the Packard Motor Car Company. This will include the procession from the White House to the Capitol, the traditional parade, the review of the parade by the President, and the Inauguration Ball.

Sixteen television cameras will be used along Pennsylvania Avenue and in the Armory, site of the Ball. Every part of the parade will be within range of at least one CBS camera at all times, with the CBS 'walkie-talkie,' which added color and drama from the floors of the Conventions, also in use.

The American Broadcasting Company plans a five-hour program with all aspects of the historic event being reported by the same team of newsmen who covered the political conventions and election.

NBC technicians have been working on plans for this Inauguration Day program since the morning after the election. CBS's camera locations are based on a combination of the inaugural route and the results of a continuing survey made during the past year to determine what scenes of the nation's Capitol most viewers prefer to see on television.

Though the planning and preparation for this great affair has been a tremendous task, the feeling seems to be that the Inauguration coverage will be anticlimactic, in a year that included presentation of the national conventions. However, the TV networks are leaving no stone unturned in searching for new gimmicks.

It is predicted more people will view the historic and dramatic 1953 Inauguration on TV than have ever watched any public event in history.

Next week TV Digest will give a detailed account of the specific programs planned and the color and drama the televisioner may expect to see unfold on his video screen on Tuesday, Jan. 20.

Television viewers have been seeing lots of famous stars on TV who have vowed never to appear in the medium. For years there has been a group of die-hard celebrities who have scorned television. They poked fun at it. They ridiculed it. They thought TV people should have their heads examined.

Tallulah Bankhead

This group of die-hards has been dwindling. One by one, they're being absorbed into the colossus they thought was a joke. I remember not so long ago on radio's "Big Show" Tallulah Bankhead said that radio was the mother of television. When some stooge asked who was television's father, Tallu sighed and said "Television has no father."

And now we have with us none other than Tallulah Bankhead—horror of the pruders, delight of the theatre-goer, mistress of the off-color story, maharanee of the hussies and generally holder of more titles for daring than the man on the flying trapeze, Billy Rose and Rita Hayworth combined.

Tallu's entry into TV was greeted with everything from huzzas to cat-calls from the critics. Like most prejudiced people, I naively wondered why so many were taking pot-shots at her. To me, she's terrific . . . at least, as terrific as she can be. Let me explain that statement.

I believe Tallulah is struggling under one of the toughest disadvantages in TV and still doing a better than creditable job. If any other performer was faced with the need to squelch about 90% of their repertoire, they'd curl up and die. Not Tallulah!

La Bankhead isn't exactly for family consumption. Her longest and strongest suit is her ability to shock people while she entertains them—something she's not allowed to do on TV. Her talents are like some of the stories told about her. Remember that one about the time she was snubbed by an acquaintance? Tallulah is supposed to have approached the gentleman, purring: "Dahling! Sorry you didn't recognize me with my clothes on." Or . . . the retort she is said to have made to Dr. Kinsey when he requested an interview with her: "You may interview me on one condition . . . that I can ask you the same questions."

This is the sort of stuff TV fans are looking for but won't get. They might have found these Tallulus in her play-acting, a little in radio and plenty in her book, but on television they'll only see a washed-out version of Tallulah.

The Tallulah they've come to know is the frog-voiced character who is reputed to live loosely and voluptuously; the unpredictable actress who spends $175,000 a year while she earns $150,000; the female dynamo given to some feigned and some not-so-feigned feuding with other movie stars and with every gossip columnist who ever peeked through a keyhole. Admittedly, some of her finest pieces of humor arose during these rages against her imagined enemies. I too always prized the classic Tallulu shot at Earl Wilson. The famous night club editor, who owns a rather high-pitched voice, once asked Bankhead about her peculiar baritone. "When you speak on the phone," he asked, "are you ever mistaken for a man?" "No," quipped Tallu, "are you?"

In reality, Tallulah is doing a tremendous job of entertainment. Shorn of the subtle bon-mot and sly innuendo, she is nonetheless proving herself a real trouper. Famous singers couldn't function very well without their voices and famous comedians couldn't fare very well without their writers. TV has virtually cut off Tallu's right arm but she's still doing nobly.

Sister Act

*Top attractions
of separate shows,
Jayne and Audrey
Meadows also are terrific as a team*

The Meadows sisters are a couple of fabulous gals. Without benefit of script writers they can put on a hilarious, unrehearsed act that lays them in the aisles. All they have to do is to draw on real material from their lives packed with outlandish incidents.

It's hard to believe that a missionary's household or an Episcopal parsonage could yield so rich a vein of comedy. But then Jayne and Audrey Meadows are not what one might expect of a minister's daughters. Spirited, imaginative and full of the devil, they created their fun out of the stuff of their daily lives.

Became Actresses

They had to make their own entertainment—there was not much in the way of amusement in the remote Chinese Mission where they were born, or later, in the small-town parsonage in the Berkshires. It seems inevitable that in creating a make-believe world into which to escape from a drab reality, they should end up as actresses.

Both are at present on television. Jayne is a member of the "I've Got A Secret" panel and Audrey plays the drab wife of Jackie Gleason in the husband-wife skit on The Jackie Gleason Show.

They're at their best when they're telling about the pranks they played when they were children, some not exactly fitting into the staid background of a parsonage. Like their little game of seeing how many things each could snatch in supermarkets without detection by the other or the brother who was their partner in crime. It wasn't until later that they discovered all their loot was charged on the monthly grocery bill which their father, the Rev. Francis J. M. Cotter, duly paid. It's the measure of the man that he allowed the children to go on with their little "game" without making a serious issue of it. P.S.: none of the children turned up "delinquent".

In the backgrounds of the life which the sisters made colorful by their sense of humor and capacity for fun, is their mother. She's a beautiful woman so remote from reality that she has little understanding of the kind of demands show business makes upon those who reach for success. She was shocked at the sordid sort of character Audrey plays with Gleason and pained that Audrey should do so unladylike a thing as stand on her head in a recent Bob and Ray show. She approves of Jayne, however. She's so ladylike as a panel member.

Jayne is tall—five feet seven, with large almond-shaped dark brown eyes, a chiseled profile and fine skin. Her hair at the moment is auburn which she admits is not its natural color. The auburn tint is for tele-genic reasons.

Audrey is the gamin type, but actually, the more practical of the two, and an excellent cook. Jayne is a born hobbyist.

The sisters live together in an apartment on East 57th Street, with a fairy-tale view of Manhattan. Jayne's husband, Milton Krims, movie writer-producer-director is at present in Italy working on a new Errol Flynn picture.

Audrey is unmarried and, according to Jayne, likely to stay that way—she's the independent kind. And as long as she gets as much fun out of life as she obviously does, there doesn't seem to be any reason for her to make a change.

NOTHING LIKE SHOW BUSINESS: When Audrey Meadows auditioned for the part of Alice of the honeymooners (with Jackie Gleason) she had to de-glamorize herself to get the role.

Frank Milano who imitates anything from a rundown battery to Rootie Kazootie is never seen on TV

THE burr head beaming above is neither a pro-football lineman nor a Met basso-profundo . . . he is Frank Milano, the man whose voice is truly his fortune.

You've never seen Frank on your TV screen but you've heard him time and time again . . . not as the voice of a man but as Gala-Poochie Pup and Poison Zoomack on the Rootie Kazootie show, as the voice of the live parrot on the Bill Goodwin stanza, as the snap, crackle, pop of Kellogg's Rice Crispies commercial, as an automobile starter with a run-down battery for Prest-O-Lite, the voice of a jet-propelled spoon for a cereal commercial on Space Cadet, as a motor boat with a sense of humor on the Berle show, and as the voice of the puppet captain pirate on Captain Video.

These are just his television sound assignments. In addition Frank has been heard on radio on "Let's Pretend," as all the animals on the Bobby Benson program, as a gorilla, elephant, lion, burrow and mosquito. On the "Voice of America" he has impersonated Edgar Allen Poe's "Black Cat" and Rip Van Winkle's dog. He has just signed a precedent-setting contract for his "Little Nipper" series on records.

Although interested in wild life, Frank broke into the entertainment field as an actor, both in stock and radio. With money the root of all evil and three squares being a necessity of life, Frank took a job as expeditor in the engineering department of DuPont in his home town of Wilmington, Del. When DuPont made a special broadcast of its "Cavalcade of America" program in Wilmington, Frank took part and finally ended up in New York as an extra on the show.

After doing the "Our Town" animal sounds in the Raymond Massey USO troupe, Milano swore off reading lines and concentrated on sound effects and animal voices. A big step in his career was when he topped a couple of pounds-full of sure-enough dogs in auditions for the voice of the grandson of Victor's famous terrier in "His Master's Voice." Feeling that Frank's imitation sounded more authentic than the real pooches, he became "Little Nipper" in 1948 and has been cutting more than 50 "Nipper" sides per year ever since.

Milano takes his profession very seriously . . . and why not, his specialty brings him between $35,000 and $50,000 per annum! He says he projects himself into the animal or sound he is imitating. When he does a dog he asks if it is to be a big animal or a small one, if it is of even disposition, excitable, nasty, or what.

A rather fitting finale to the tale of Milano, the mogul of TV sound, is the fact that Mrs. Milano is a mechanical engineer.

ROUNDS vs. POINTS

BY HARVEY POLLACK

*TV ring rooters confused
by contrasting methods used in various states*

All the furore about the Joey Giardello—Billy Graham decision reversal serves the purpose of accentuating the various type of scoring systems utilized in the states from whence your TV boxing originates.

Essentially it's just a matter of whether points determine the winners of the bouts, whether rounds constitute the entire scoring system or whether a combination of both methods is used. Boxing now comes your way on Mondays from Brooklyn, on Wednesday from places like Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Los Angeles, and Cleveland, on Fridays from New York and starting Jan. 24 on Saturdays from Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington.

The round system is a type we like least of all and it's used right here in Pennsylvania among other places. Under this plan, the officials award the rounds to one fighter or another or else call it even. At the end of the fight the boxer with the greater number of rounds gains the verdict of the officials.

We don't like this style. A boxer can win a round by a wide margin, knocking his opponent all over the ring, and still not gain a thing on an adversary who wins a round by the skin of his teeth. After all the bout is divided into rounds for the convenience of the boxers, and a battle to the finish would be to the liking of many ring-siders who feel the rest periods take the edge off a bout.

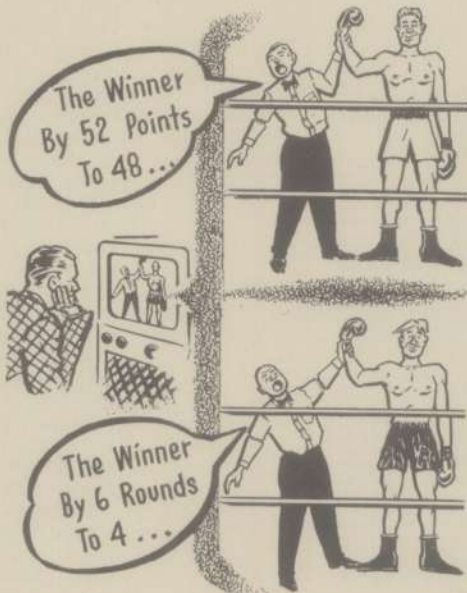

The New York system uses rounds primarily. If there is a stalemate, it then reverts to a point system which has the judges dividing three points between the fighters. This method is better than the round-solely method but it's still not the best as several fights from the Garden have demonstrated over the years.

We like the point system best of all. There are various methods, some states dividing ten points a round between the fighters, others using 12 and some going as high as 15. In each case, it's the man with the more points who wins the bout.

Under this plan a fellow who wins a round by a wide margin may get an 8-2 edge in points. A man who wins by a close margin takes the session, 6-4. In this way, a man can still win the fight even though he doesn't win as many rounds as his opponent. What's more the plan gives an incentive to a boxer who has been whipped in the first part of a bout to rally in the later portions and have a chance to win. Under the round plan in a 10-rounder, a boxer who wins the first 6 rounds (mainly on close shaves) can't lose the bout unless he's kayoed. In the point system, a boxer can lose the first 6 rounds (say all by 6 to 4) and still take the duke if he should win the last four by margins like 7-3 and 8-2.

So there are the plans. We told you which one we like. Which one do YOU prefer?
